Unisys Named to The Wall Street Journal's 2026 America's Top 100 Most Loved Workplaces®

Unisys makes its debut on the America's list, building on three consecutive years of Global Most Loved Workplaces® recognition for employee satisfaction and engagement

BLUE BELL, Pa., Nov. 5, 2026 – Unisys (NYSE: UIS) has been named to the 2026 list of America's Top 100 Most Loved Workplaces®, developed by the Best Practice Institute (BPI) and featured in The Wall Street Journal. Unisys debuted on the America's list, following its third consecutive year named to the Global Top 100 Most Loved Workplaces® list, published by The Economist and research backed by BPI. The recognition reflects the company's commitment to upskilling employees and equipping them with the resources and opportunities needed to embrace AI-driven innovation.

"Being named to America's Top 100 Most Loved Workplaces® is a meaningful milestone that reflects the experiences and perspectives of our employees," said Mike Thomson, CEO and president, Unisys. "Their passion, curiosity and commitment to our work foster a culture that enables growth and opportunities to deliver a meaningful impact. As we continue advancing our AI-first strategy and supporting transformation journeys for clients around the world, we remain dedicated to strengthening the employee experience at Unisys."

Most Loved Workplaces® certifies companies where employees are the happiest and most satisfied at work. Unisys was recognized based on survey data showing employees' perspectives on various elements of employee satisfaction and sentiment, including the level of respect, collaboration, support and sense of belonging they feel within the company.

Backed by BPI's proprietary research, the Most Loved Workplaces® methodology evaluates organizations using the Love of Workplace Index®. BPI surveyed more than 1,800 companies across six continents, including North and South America.
